

SCHOONER SINKS AND CREW CLINGS FAST TO RIGGING

Cape Hatteras Life Savers
Making Heroic Efforts to Rescue Men.

An unidentified three-masted schooner is sunk two and one-half miles off the shore of Cape Hatteras. The Hatteras life-saving crew has been battling for hours to reach the stranded vessel without success. The Revenue Cutter Onondaga left Chesapeake Bay to the rescue at 11 o'clock this morning.

First news of the disaster came to the Revenue Cutter headquarters from the superintendent of the Cape Hatteras life-saving station. This message, sent by wireless, said every effort to reach the vessel had been in vain, but that the station keeper could see the crew clinging to the rigging, with apparently enough strength to keep up for hours. On this information the cutter Onondaga, Captain de Otte commanding, was ordered to the rescue. Captain de Otte flashed wireless information there was a dense fog down the coast, and a heavy sea running. The cutter Onondaga and Apache floated the Hamburg American steamer Bethania, in the dark hours of the early morning, and that vessel is now anchored in Hampton Roads making necessary temporary repairs. The Apache is standing by.

No word has been received so far today of the cutters Androscoggin and Gresham, which are trying to make their way to Bay of Islands, in the Gulf of the St. Lawrence. According to the positions of the two vessels, reported late last night and early this morning they are apparently in Cabots Strait. It was at this point they were expected to encounter heavy fog. Revenue cutter officials are waiting in suspense to see whether they get through to the fisherman imprisoned in Bay of Islands and Bonaparte.

Today, this was presented to the association as an annual report, and was ordered printed and distributed to the delegates.

Resume of Plans.

In it Mr. McKee makes a thorough resume of various plans, including the Austin, Gillette, Perkins, and Hamill measures. Heintorsen the Hamill plan as being the "most feasible, simple, and economical plan for the Government to establish."

In speaking of the Austin bill he declared, "We believe the Austin bill, which provides for an increase of 15 per cent in salary to all classified employees, and costing about $20,000,000, in addition to its heavy deductions from salaries, will hardly receive serious consideration."

"The compulsory savings, or contributory bill by Austin, Gillette, and Perkins, are alike as to deductions from salaries."

The convention will hold morning and afternoon sessions today and tomorrow.

The New Men's Wear Shop

THE GREATER PALAIS ROYAL

A. LISNER Washington, D. C. G STREET

Two Doors East of 11th

January 19, 1912.

Gentlemen:

The Times readers have not been sufficiently advised of the New Men's Wear Shop. This small but compact little shop with its own entrance—two doors east of Eleventh street—is as distinct a shop as if not under the Greater Palais Royal roof. And no man's store has a brighter chief or abler young men to assist him. With the policy of the new shop to be always strictly observed—nothing too cheap and nothing too dear—with the new things first and old things never—the new men's wear shop hopes to win and hold an army of gentlemen as friends and patrons. Have you attended the first clearing sale here? It's going on now—learn of tomorrow's program.

These white wool shirts and drawers are here in all sizes to 50 inches. They are here—only because they are the best wool undergarments to retail at $1.50. Look for the "Reis" label on each—and know that the difference between $1.50 and $1.15 is really so much saved in the cost of each garment purchased.

$4.00

$1.00 "Faultless" Shirts $1.00

Standard at $1.50 to $3.00

What's in a name?

The answer is well given in shirts—in the advertisements of nameless shirts made for cheap sales and the "Faultless" retailed all over the United States at $1.50 to $3.00.

With these "Faultless" Shirts at $1.00, instead of $1.50 to $3.00, the name is everything—making the nameless cheap shirts seem dear.

The "Faultless" was the first coat shirt produced.

Coat shirt applied to a "Faultless" means more than buttoning like a coat—it means fitting like one.

$1.00 for "Faultless" Shirts with stiff bosom and attached cuffs; imported woven madras and percale shirts, plain and pleated, white and colors; soisette shirts with turn-back cuffs.
